11 Unique Funeral Venues

More families are choosing personalized memorial celebrations of life.

BY LINNEA CROWTHER | LEGACY.COM

Many people haven't been to a funeral or memorial service that took place somewhere other than a church, funeral home, or cemetery. And while plenty find great comfort in knowing exactly what's expected — a visitation, followed by a religious service, followed by a graveside service — more and more people want to plan something unique.

One way you can break out of the traditional mold is choosing an unconventional venue. What if, instead of sitting in pews at a church, friends and family could gather to celebrate a life under a canopy on a sunny beach? What if a person addicted to baseball could be remembered at their favorite ballpark? Here are some more ideas for unconventional funeral venues:

- 1. Movie theater. Celebrate the life of a movie buff with a private movie theater screening. Plan some time before the movie for one or more people to say a few words about your loved one, then watch a film together. Maybe it will be one of the deceased's favorites.
- 2. College or university. Many people have deep emotional ties to an alma mater, and a service at that beloved hall of learning could be perfect. There are many potential locations at most colleges: a classroom, a theater, a gymnasium, a chapel.
- 3. Bowling alley. If your loved one never missed league night, honor their memory with a bowling memorial service. Rent out the alley for an afternoon and allow some time to share memories before bowling a few games together.
- 4. A national park. Bring the majesty of nature to a funeral service by setting it in a beautiful outdoor area. Whether you gather in a picnic glen or step off the beaten path for a hike or a climb, you've found a perfect way to remember a nature lover.

5. Brewery or winery. If your loved one appreciated a well-crafted beverage, remember them with a memorial service at their favorite local brewery or winery. Most will also serve soft drinks for non-drinkers.

6. Boat. Charter a boat to take a tour in memory of your loved one. Sometimes this idea is combined with an ash-scattering ceremony for a "burial at sea."

7. Museum. A history or art lover might be best remembered at a favorite museum. Many museums have rooms you can rent or reserve, and guests can take in the exhibits before or after the service.

8. Conservatory. One way to honor a nature lover even when the weather is cold is to gather at a conservatory, where plants thrive in the warmth of a greenhouse.

9. Restaurant. A memorial service at a restaurant can be a fancy five-star affair, a casual meal at a cozy diner, or anything in between. Reserve a side room or rent the whole place out.

10. Zoo. Planning a memorial service for an animal lover? Many zoos have meeting rooms for rent, some with views of animal exhibits. Schedule a tour of the zoo after the service.

11. Historic mansion. Many towns have an historic mansion that's been converted into an event venue. This could be a graceful and stately place to remember a loved one. Some of these ideas only require a slim budget, while others will be pricier. And some will require more advance planning.

It's not always a bad thing to wait a bit after a death before having a memorial service, though, since these locations are generally places where you won't be able to have your loved one's body present at a funeral. While it's still more common to have a service within about a week after a death, it's not unheard of to gather after a month or two. This may work best if you're looking for an unconventional venue.

On the other hand, a location like a park or a movie theater is more likely to be available on short notice. If it's important to you to gather friends and family together for support while your grief is still fresh, consider places where you can quickly make a reservation. Or hold your service on a weekday rather than a weekend. And remember that a funeral director can be a huge help with booking a venue, even an unconventional one. They'll do what it takes to help you plan the funeral you're envisioning.
